ABSTRACT

This standard provides detailed descriptions of the planning and procedures required for the transition of computer software and support responsibilities to the Missile Systems Software Center (MSSC) U.S. Army Missile Command. Volume I describes the organization, mission, functions, and resources of the MSSC. Volume II contains two appendices: Appendix A--References and Appendix B--Glossary.

APPENDIX A - REFERENCES1. INTRODUCTION

The documents included in this appendix were found by using the Missile Systems Software Center (MSSC) mission, director functions, and functional areas as sources for keywords. These keywords were then used to make a preliminary survey of the documentation sources. Relevant documents were identified and reviewed for references to other applicable documentation. Several iterations through the documentation produced a list of over 800 possibly applicable documents. A review of the authority, purpose, and scope of the candidate documents resulted in the elimination of those not applicable to MSSC, or too broad in scope.

2. DESCRIPTION

This appendix is partitioned into three lists:

- a. List A contains all the documents selected in the literature survey.
- b. List B contains applicable documents keyed by subparagraph number to the MSSC director functions, common functions, and functional areas so that the user can quickly identify documents related to his specific area of responsibility. Documents from the following sources are included:
 1. Federal, DoD, and Military Standards
 2. Military Specifications
 3. Department of Defense Directives
 4. Department of the Army Directives
 5. DARCOM Directives
 6. MICOM Directives.
- c. List C provides a cross-reference for the documentation. Each document is named, with its associated functions.
